Concerning Behaviors

How to Identify and Report

There are many behaviors that may cause concern for the safety and well-being of an individual or the campus as a whole. Learn how to identify, how to report, and what the investigation process is like.

In situations where an individual has concerns about someone's behavior but is unsure whether such behavior constitutes a "threat" to self or others, the individual should report the information to the University Campus Police to allow the University the opportunity to assess the situation and respond as necessary.
